GAZEL ON HIS LOVE.

WEET
MAID,
if thou wouldst charm my sight,
And bid
these arms
thy neck
infold ;

That rosy cheek, that lily hand,
Would give thy poet more delight

Than all Bocara's vaunted gold,
Than all the gems of Samarcand.

Boy, let yon liquid ruby flow,
And bid thy pensive heart be glad,
Whate'er the frowning zealots say :
Tell them, their Eden cannot show
A stream so clear as Rocnabad,
A bow'r so sweet as Mosellay.

Oh ! when these fair perfidious
maids,
Whose eyes our secret haunts infest,
Their dear destructive charms display,
Each glance my tender heart invades,
And robs my wounded soul of rest,
As Tartars seize their destined prey.

In vain with love our bosoms glow :
Can all our tears, can all our sighs,
New lustre to those charms impart ?
Can cheeks, where living roses blow,
Where Nature spreads her richest dyes,
Require the borrowed gloss of art ?

Speak not of fate :—ah ! change the theme,
And talk of odours, talk of wine,
Talk of the flow'rs that round us
bloom :
'Tis all a cloud, 'tis all a dream ;
To love and joy thy thoughts confine,
Nor hope to pierce the sacred gloom,
Beauty has such resistless pow'r,
That ev'n the chaste Egyptian dame
Sighed for the blooming Hebrew boy :

For her how fatal was the hour
When to the banks of Nilus came
A youth so lovely and so coy !

But ah ! sweet maid, my counsel hear (Youth should attend when those advise Whom long experience renders sage) :
While music charms the ravished ear,
While sparkling cups delight our eyes,
Be gay, and scorn the frowns of age.

What cruel answer have I heard ?
And yet, by Heav'n, I love thee still :
Can aught be cruel from thy lips ?
Yet say, how fell that bitter word
From lips which streams of sweetness fill,
Which naught but drops of honey sip ?

Go boldly forth, my simple lay,
Whose accents flow with artless ease,
Like orient pearls at random strung ;
Thy notes are sweet, the damsels say,
But oh ! far sweeter, if they please
The Nymph for whom these notes are sung.

THE FEAST OF SPRING.

MY breast is filled with roses,
My cup is crowned with wine,
And by my side reposes
The maid I hail as mine.

The monarch, whereso'er he be,
Is but a slave compared to me !

Their glare no torches throwing
Shall in our bower be found ;
Her eyes, like moonbeams glowing,
Cast light enough around :
And well all odours I can spare,
Who scent the perfume of her hair.

The honey-dew thy charm might borrow,

Thy lip alone to me is sweet ;
When thou art absent, faint with sorrow

I hide me in some lone retreat.

Why talk to me of power or fame ?—

What are those idle toys to me ?

Why ask the praises of my name ?

My joy, my triumph is in thee !

How blest am I ! around me, swelling,

The notes of melody arise ;
I hold the cup, with juice excelling,
And gaze upon thy radiant eyes.
O Hafiz !—never waste thy hours

Without the cup, the lute, and love !
For 'tis the sweetest time of flowers,
And none these moments shall reprove.

The nightingales around thee sing,
It is the joyous feast of spring.

GAZEL ON HIS LOVE

SWEET breeze ! her breath thy murmurs bear,

The perfume of her sigh is thine ;
But dare not play amidst her hair,

For every golden curl is mine !

O rose ! what radiant hues hast thou,
That in her face less brightly glow !
Her love is joy without regret,
While briars and thorns thy bloom beset.

O opening buds !—her cheeks more fair,
For ever rosy blushing are.

Narcissus !—thou art pale of hue,
Her eyes that languish, sparkle too ;
I tell thee, gently waving pine !
More graceful is her form than thine.

O my rapt soul ! if thou hadst power
To choose all blessings earth can give,
Is there a better, richer dower,
Than for her tenderness to live ?
Come, my sole love ! from those dear eyes

Thy Hafiz is too long away ;
Come, give his heart the sweet surprise,
Though 'twere but for a single day !

THE SEASON OF THE ROSE.

STRING the lyre ! — Has Fortune ever

Given to men of worth their due ?

Then, since vain is all endeavour,

And we scorn her malice too,
Why should we refuse to share
All the joys these hours prepare ?
Now the air is filled with mirth ;
Now the roses spring from earth ;
Now they bloom, but now alone,—

Fear not, though the wise reprove ;
Ere their soft perfume be gone,
Raise the soul to verse and love,

O Hafiz !—it were shame to say,
—In nightingales like us 'twere
treason,—
That we, who make the magic lay,
Sang not in the rose's season.

THE OMEN.

THIS morning I resolved, at last,
All idle thoughts far hence to cast,
And in repentance steep my soul,—
Forgot the roses and the bowl !

‘Oh, let some omen be my guide,
And I will follow it,’ I cried :
But say, alas ! what could I do ?

‘Twas spring, that breaker of all vows ;—

I saw the trees their leaves renew,
I saw fresh roses on the boughs :
I saw the merry cup go round,
My rivals with enjoyment crowned !

Whilst I, a looker-on, must see
All gay and full of hope but me !
One draught !—but one !—that drunk,
I fly

At once this dang'rous company.
But, ah ! she came !—as buds to light,
My heart expanded at her sight,
And every strong resolve gave way—
My rivals saw me blest as they !
I'll seat my love amidst the bower,
With rosy garlands bind her hair ;
Wreath round her arms the jasmine
flower,
Than those white chains more sweet
and fair,
Away !—I was not born a sage ;
Am I the censor of the age ?—

Is mine a priest's or judge's part,
To chide at mirth and love like this ?

Elated, like the rose, my heart Throws off its shrouding veil for bliss.

Why should I censure wine ? fill full
To her, the kind, the beautiful.
If but one kiss I should obtain,
Youth and delight were mine again ;
And I another age should live.
Such power the smiles of beauty give.
Reproach me, then, ye wise, no more,
Nor say I joy in secret pleasure ;
Let all behold my cup run o'er,
While harp and lute keep joyous measure.

MYSTIC ODE.

IN wide Eternity's vast space,
Where no beginning was, wert
Thou :
The rays of all-pervading grace
Beneath Thy veil flamed on Thy brow.
Then Love and Nature sprang to birth,
And Life and Beauty filled the earth.

Awake, my soul ! pour forth thy praise,
To that great Being anthems raise—

That wondrous Architect who said,
'Be formed,' and this great orb was made.

Since first I heard the blissful sound—
'To man My Spirit's breath is given ;'

I knew, with thankfulness profound,
His sons we are—our Home is heaven.

Oh ! give me tidings that shall tell
When I may hope with thee to dwell,

That I may quit this world of pain,
Nor seek to be its guest again.

A bird of holiness am I,
That from the vain world's net would fly ;

Shed, bounteous Lord, one cheering shower

From Thy pure cloud of guiding power
Before, even yet, the hour is come,
When my dust rises towards its home.

What are our deeds ?—all worthless,
all—

O bring Devotion's wine,
That strength upon my soul may fall
From drops Thou mad'st divine.

The world's possessions fade and flee,

The only good is—loving Thee !

O happy hour ! when I shall rise
From earth's delusions to the skies,
Shall find my soul at rest, and greet
The traces of my loved one's feet :

Dancing with joy, whirled on with speed,
Like motes that gorgeous sunbeams
feed,
Until I reach the fountain bright
Whence yonder sun derives his light.

GAZEL TO HIS LOVE.

HAPLY, gale, if thou shouldst rove,
Wand'ring on thy trackless way,
Near the mansion of my love ;
There awhile, I pr'ythee, stay ;
And from her amber tresses bring
Delicious perfume on thy loaded wing.

But, regardless of my pain,
Should, alas ? the heav'ns decree,
That my labours must be vain,
And mine eyes no message see :
Some grains of dust at least, I pray,
From my dear mistress' door, O bring away !

Beggar that I am ! why seek
What I never can possess ?
'Tis a wish as proud as weak,
'Tis a hope without redress !
Except, when I in sleep shall spy
The beauteous form of her for whom I die.

Let the scornful nymph my flame
Cherish with no kind return ;
Still my passion glows the same,
Still unceasing shall it burn !
Nor shall a world's vast wealth suffice,
To buy one ringlet of that hair I prize.

What avails it that with glee,
Carolling thy pleasant song,
Hafiz, thou from cares are free,
Cares that to the world belong !
When, subject to love's proud controul,
A tyrant fair enslaves thy captive soul ?

ON HIS TRAVELS.

THE world to me has been a home ;
Wherever knowledge could be sought,
Through differing climes I loved to roam,
And every shade of feeling caught
From minds, whose varied fruits supply
The food of my philosophy.
And still the treasures of my store
Have made my wanderings less severe ;
From every spot some prize I bore,
From every harvest gleaned an ear,

But find no land can ever vie
With bright Shirâz in purity ;
And blest for ever be the spot
Which makes all other climes forgot !

NOTE.

MOHAMMED SCHEMS-ED-DIN HAFIZ the prince of Persian lyric poets is to us the most familiar of all the poets of the East with the exception of Omar al-Khayyámi. He was born at Shirâz and is known to have been a contemporary of Dante.

In Persia his odes are considered worthy of comparison with the Koran itself. He is Persia's immortal poet, and to this day the beautiful dark-eyed Shirâz maidens may be seen on their annual pilgrimage to his sacred tomb bearing their bouquets of roses bound round with the brightly coloured silken handkerchiefs, which they themselves have fondly woven. These the pilgrims place at his grave where they consult his oracular odes for information about their future.

Many are the stories told of the odes of 'the Anacreon of the East' having been opened at random to be consulted by kings and leaders. Even at his death in 1388, when some Mohammedans in Shirâz forbad his burial according to their rites, owing to his having violated the laws of the Koran, his friends on opening his works are said to have read :—

'O ! turn not your steps from the obsequies of Hafiz ;
For tho' immersed in sin, he will rise into paradise.'

Notwithstanding his fame, for his works have been classics to millions of people for many centuries, he seems to have died a poor man.

The translations of Gazels or love songs contained in this little volume are by Sir William Jones, with the exception of 'Gazel to his love,' by John Nott, and 'On his travels,' by Sir Gore Ouseley.
